Chairman Vinson Backs Jupiter

Air Force "reluctance" to give "wholehearted support" to Secretary McElroy's decision on the Thor-Jupiter controversy has brought sharp criticism from Chairman Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee. The powerful Congressman says Air Force pride may have to bow to "the overriding need" of attaining an early IRBM capability. PAGE 3

Compromises Come To The Fore On Pay Raise Action; All Agree Increases Needed; Firm Decision Delayed

NEW military pay scales shaping up in the House and Senate will look like Grandma's recipe for plum pudding—a little of this, a little of that, a scoop of flour and a pinch of salt.

The final product probably will include the most important Cordiner ingredients, some spices from the Pentagon pantry, and a handful of plums tossed in for extra measure by the Congress.

Like Grandma's pudding, the result could be highly successful, or it could fall slightly flat. This is the outlook as the Kilday Subcommittee neared completion of its open hearings in the House and the Stennis Subcommittee launched its own study on the Senate side of the Capitol.

"Compromise" appears to be the key word both on the part of the Congressional committees and the Department of Defense.

Chairman John C. Stennis (D-Miss) pointed these factors up as he opened the Senate hearings 25 February with a statement that there seems to be an unanimous desire to provide a pay system which best meets the needs of the Armed Forces. He said the only "issue" is whether the Cordiner proposals, the Defense Department bill or "possibly some other approach" is the right answer.

Turn to Page 11 for pay testimony of top civilian and military officials.

Assistant Secretary of Defense William H. Francis, Jr., indicated to both the Stennis and Kilday Subcommittees that he is willing to make concessions.

He said he is agreeable to a suggested change in the bill which would assure that any enlisted man who is promoted to officer rank would not lose pay as a result. The House committee had pointed out that such could be the result under the current terms of the bill.

Secretary Francis also indicated that

Pay Group Backs Major Changes In Bill's Three Problem Areas

TWELVE of the 13 members of the Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee on military pay are solidly in favor of granting cost-of-living increases to the Armed Forces, extending pay increases to those on the retired rolls, and retaining some form of longevity pay.

A JOURNAL poll, compiled through exclusive interviews with individual members of the committee, shows that all 12 are agreed at present on these three problem areas. The 13th member of the committee, who has been absent from the hearings due to illness, could not be contacted.

Members who were polled also were asked for their views on four other major areas which appear to be headed for compromise. They involve:

- Spreading pay increases over a four-year period.

- Counting all pay for retirement purposes.

- Increasing the pay of top officers to levels recommended by the Cordiner Report.

- Adding specific language to authorize proficiency payments.

All of the Congressmen told THE JOURNAL they are keeping open minds on the numerous areas of controversy in the pay

Streamline DoD, Drop 14 Ass't Sec's, Strengthen JCS, House Leaders Demand

Congressional dissatisfaction with the Pentagon chain of command erupted this week into a broadside proposal to "streamline" top decision-making within the Defense Department and to give broader powers to the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) and two top members of the House Armed Services Committee revealed plans to eliminate the "weaknesses in the present organization" and strengthen "those features which have proven to be valid attributes in our national defense."

Identical bills to put the plan into effect were introduced by Chairman Vinson, Representative Leslie J. Arends (Ill.), ranking Republican member of the Armed Services Committee, and Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex), on 26 February. The legislation will:

- Eliminate five Assistant Secretaries of Defense and the Defense Department General Counsel.

- Restrict the functions of the Defense Department Comptroller.

- Create a new Assistant Secretary of Defense for Materiel Requirements.

- Eliminate the Under Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

- Eliminate two Assistant Secretaries from each of the three Services.

- Limit civilian employees in the Office of the Secretary of Defense to 600, thereby eliminating 1,800 employees and "an unknown number of ad hoc committees."

- Provide membership on the National Security Council for the Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

- Strengthen and tighten JCS control of the unified commands.

- Authorize JCS members to delegate

Plan Battleships For Missile Logistics Duty; Dreadnaught Would Also Fill Tanker Role

The Navy hopes to convert a 45,000-ton Iowa-class battleship to service as an auxiliary supply ship.

In an interview with THE JOURNAL, RADM. Roy L. Johnson, Director, Long Range Objective Group, Office of CNO, revealed the Navy's desire for authorization to convert a mothballed BB into a prototype logistics support vessel in the "immediate future."

This could mean the Navy will ask Congress for conversion funds in the Fiscal Year 1960 budget.

Tentatively, the Navy plans to designate the giant vessel an "AOE." The

The last active duty battleship, USS Wisconsin, will be decommissioned on 8 March at Bayonne, N. J.

The USS Iowa, first in a line of 45,000-ton dreadnaughts, was mothballed at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard on 24 February.

When the Wisconsin's flag is furled and she retires to the Reserve Fleet, the event will mark the first time in more than a half century that the Navy has not had a BB on active service.

New Spot For Lt. Gen. Eddleman Sparks Chain Of Shifts In Army's High Command

The Army set in motion top level assignment changes with the announcement 26 February that Lt. Gen. Clyde D. Eddleman will be shifted from the Pentagon to an overseas assignment.

THE JOURNAL has predicted that General Eddleman, Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations since September 1955, will succeed Lt. Gen. Bruce C. Clarke, Jr., commanding general of the 7th Army in Germany.

General Eddleman's successor will be Lt. Gen. James E. Moore, High Commissioner of the Ryukyus on Okinawa. General Moore, who comes to Washington 1 June, will be succeeded a month earlier by Lt. Gen. Donald P. Booth, Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

It is expected that General Clarke will be elevated shortly to four-star rank to replace General Willard G. Wyman as commanding general of the Continental Army Command at Ft. Monroe, Va. General Wyman had been scheduled for retirement this March, but was extended on active duty until 31 July.

The Army announcement did not indicate Eddleman's specific assignment, nor did it say who will replace Booth. The Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel is Maj. Gen. James F. Collins, who has held that post since 1 March 1957.

Yet to be named by the Army as THE JOURNAL went to press is a Chief of Ordnance to succeed Lt. Gen. Emerson L. Cummings, who became Deputy Commanding General 8th Army and Commanding General U. S. Army Japan 1 March.

Assignment of Eddleman to the 7th Army could pave the way for his attainment of four-star rank next year. General Henry I. Hodes, Commander in Chief U. S. Army Europe, is slated for retirement in March 1959. It is recalled that Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker mentioned such a succession from 7th Army to USAREUR at the time he said that retiring Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin had been offered the 7th Army Post at Stuttgart.

General Gavin, Chief of Research and Development, retires 31 March to be succeeded by Lt. Gen. Arthur G. Trudeau.

There is speculation that General Gavin's retirement ceremonies will be held at Ft. Bragg, N. C.—home of the 82d Airborne Division which he led to a brilliant combat record during World War II and which he commanded after the war.

Tax Relief Is Ruled For Disabled Retired

Thousands of retired Service personnel who received taxable disability retired pay may now exempt large portions of it from income tax as "sick pay" and be eligible for income tax refunds as far back as 1954.

Under Internal Revenue Service ruling 58-43, members of the Armed Forces retired for physical disability are automatically considered absent from work on account of injuries or sickness and may exclude up to $100 per week of the taxable portion of their disability retired pay as "sick pay" until they reach "retirement age." To take advantage of this tax exemption they do not have to have an additional illness or be hospitalized.

"Retirement Age"

In the case of all officers and warrant officers, "retirement age" is the age at which they would have completed 40 years' service or age 62, whichever is earlier. For enlisted members it is the point at which they would have completed 30 years' service, regardless of age.

The ruling, given 14 February, held that officers retired for causes other than physical disability, such as for age or length of service, are not considered absent from work because of sickness or personal injury. These officers are not entitled to exclude any part of their retired pay from taxable gross income even though they were sick or injured and hospitalized as a result thereof.

Entitled To Refunds

The effect of the ruling is that many disability retired personnel will be entitled to refunds on returns filed for previous years and not yet precluded by the statute of limitations.

It should be noted that returns for the calendar year 1954 were due to be filed by 15 April 1955, but claims for refunds for that year may be filed until on or before 15 April 1958. The date of filing, according to the Internal Revenue Service, is the date on which the claims are actually in the Commissioner's hands.

AMC Shifts Central Procurement Contract Fiscal Functions To 34 Field Offices

The Air Materiel Command will shift accounting and finance functions for central procurement contracts to 34 offices in the field—part of a plan to improve central procurement management.

The plan, known as project PIC, places responsibility for accounting and disbursing at designated Air Force Procurement Districts and Air Force Plant Representative offices.

Formerly these functions for central procurement contracts were divided among Air Materiel Areas, Air Force Depots, and Headquarters, Air Materiel Command.

Relocation is scheduled to be completed by 30 June. Seventeen of the 34 offices have already been activated.

Upon completion of the relocation, the Command will be able to establish a fully integrated central procurement management system, making possible a more realistic and accurate assessment of resources.

Brig. Gen. L. P. Dahl, Comptroller of AMC, announced that the program is being monitored by his Operations and Systems Office. Col. B. P. Guerin is chief of the organization and Lt. Col. A. A. Saitta is the project officer. Mr. Herbert Steele is chairman of the working committee.

Following is a list of the Air Procurement Districts and Air Force Plant Representative offices involved in the relocation: Newark APD; Sperry Gyroscope General Electric, Syracuse; General Electric, Lackland; San Francisco APD; Douglas, Long Beach; Sikorsky, Bridgeport; Northrop, Hawthorne; Los Angeles APD; North American; Hughes, Culver City; Martin Co., Baltimore; Boston APD; Boeing, Seattle; Boeing, Wichita Douglas, Tulsa; Lockheed, Marietta; Curtiss-Wright, Woodbridge; Indianapolis APD; Rochester APD; St. Louis APD; Lockheed, Burbank; Republic Farmingdale; Milwaukee APD; Cleveland APD; Philadelphia APD; Detroit APD; Dayton APD; Chicago APD; New York APD; Dallas APD; San Diego APD; Arizona APD; Atlanta APD.

Missiles Have No Discretion, Reliability Still Low, AFA Told, 'Need Man In Airplane'

The advent of missiles has not negated the "continuing operational need for manned aircraft," Maj. Gen. James Ferguson, Director of Requirements, Deputy Chief of Staff, Development, stresses.

Speaking at the Air Force Association's Fourth Jet Age Conference in Washington, D. C., on 26 February, the General took issue with "significant elements in the country" who would "stampede" the Air Force "into outer space, leaving little else behind."

He said "the role of airpower in our national security requires that a responsive and responsible Air Force be capable of an hour-by-hour basis of confronting and defeating Communist aggression in any of the various forms in which it may appear. We cannot, on the one hand, be the deterring force that prevents all-out assault, while, on the other hand, we forsake the capability to deal with nibbling aggression, subversion or any other forms of Soviet military advance."

The General told his audience that manned aircraft provide mobility, flexibility and discretion. Discretion, he noted, cannot yet be built into a missile.

Discretion in the air, General Ferguson said, continues to remain a strong deterrent to aggression. Manned planes, he pointed out, are needed to locate hidden targets and to destroy small-hardened targets.

"With all their capability, the destructive power of the missile is not equal to that of the manned bomber," the Development Director said. "In warfare, victory demands the ability to render enemy military strength ineffective. The enemy will protect his military resources. They will be hardened, camouflaged and dispersed. It will be necessary to ferret them out and attack them with high orders of accuracy and large weapons."

At the same time, he stated, "in any new, highly complex endeavor such as missile and space flight, reliability is initially lower than we can afford, both economically and operationally. In this respect, the unique ability of man to observe, to reason and to react with corrective override action gives to the man-

Sees No Such Thing As An Unmanned Weapon

Speaking on the same AFA program, Dr. George E. Valley, jr., concurred with Maj. Gen. James Ferguson, that "too many people take missiles for granted" and have come to feel "because missiles are new and remarkable feats of technology, that they must automatically be superior weapons."

"Actually," the Chief Air Force Scientist stated, "there is no such thing as an unmanned weapon system."

He said that even if push-button missile warfare actually does come into being, someone will have to push the button.

The Chief Scientist said that many proponents of the guided missile use the "economic argument that missiles, once made can be stored, like rifle bullets, against the day they may be needed; whereas manned aircraft being flown continuously wear out, consume fuel, spare parts and the like."

He told his audience that such an argument is not only "fallacious" but "dangerous."

"We need not arguments," he said, "but dispassionate plans for integrating missiles into our forces."

"Those who support the missile to the exclusion of the manned bomber," Dr. Valley said, "seem to argue that the strategic war is no longer a battle between men, but something more analogous to an engineering demolition team."

ned system a combat reliability that we cannot approach in unmanned systems, even with the most elaborate check-out and back-up equipment devised so far."

The Air Force, he told the Conference, envisions "an aircraft which can circle the earth one or several times, providing surveillance and attacking targets of its own choosing. Through the use of high resolution radar we can pinpoint many targets at altitudes of two to three hundred miles."

UK To Get AF Thor Echelon In May; 500-600 To Comprise Pioneer Unit

The Air Force will deploy the advance echelon of its first Douglas IRBM Thor squadron to the United Kingdom in May.

The 572d Strategic Missile Squadron, under Colonel Harry J. Zink, will become operational and will be in the UK until it is replaced eventually by an RAF unit.

Colonel Zink told a reporter at the Air Force Association Jet Age Conference in Washington, D. C., that his pioneer squadron will be made up of about 500-600 officers and airmen—probably larger than successor units.

Attending the Jet Age sessions with Colonel Zink was Col. William C. Erlenbusch, who will command the first Chrysler IRBM Jupiter squadron going overseas. This unit will leave the U. S. before the end of the year, but its destination has not yet been made known.

Colonel Zink's executive officer is Lt. Col. Clarence Lollar. The Jupiter exec is Lt. Col. James Brewster.

Colonel Zink said that Thor personnel will be rotated from the UK to the United States for periodic tests involving actual combat readiness firings.

The Thor squadron was activated 1 January at Cook AFB, Cal. The Jupiter unit, which will have about 700 personnel, is in training at the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, Huntsville, Ala.

The timetable for the Thor deployment became known 26 February, two days after a joint US-UK announcement that

Two AF Colonels Move

Col. William H. Dieterle, formerly assigned to SAC Headquarters, Offutt AFB, Neb., has been assigned as Deputy Chief of Staff for Installations, Technical Training Air Force Headquarters, Gulfport, Miss.

Col. John D. Howell, TTA Deputy Chief of Staff, will become Director of Statistical Services, MATS Headquarters, Scott AFB, Ill.

Chairman Vinson Questions AF Reluctance To Support Jupiter Decision; Backs SecDef.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee has blasted Air Force reluctance "to give wholehearted support" to Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy's December decision to put both the Army Thor and the Air Force Jupiter into production.

Chairman Vinson

Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas told the Armed Services Committee recently (THE JOURNAL, 15 Feb.) that he plans to ask the Defense Secretary to reopen the case.

Chairman Vinson says he cannot understand the Air Force's attitude.

In a letter to Secretary McElroy, the powerful House member has offered to support the Secretary's decision. If only money is needed, he said, "you will have my complete support in requesting whatever additional funds may be required to insure the deployment of the Jupiter squadrons."

Pride Must Bow

Congressman Vinson said, "In the final analysis, Service pride must bow to the overriding need of an IRBM capability at the earliest practicable date."

Secretary Douglas has told the Committee that he is "troubled" by the cost of producing both missiles. He said the desire is growing in the Air Force to limit the program "to one missile and to save the money that could be saved by producing only one missile and training units for only one missile."

Mr. Vinson's Letter

Here is what Chairman Vinson had to say on the subject in his letter to Secretary McElroy:

"Dear Mr. Secretary:

"On Friday of last week, February 7, the Secretary of the Air Force testified before the committee, in executive session, during the continuation of the committee's investigation of various aspects of national defense, including the missile program.

"During Secretary Douglas' testimony he was questioned on the various aspects of the Jupiter-Thor matter. This discussion included a consideration of your decision of last fall to produce both the Thor and the Jupiter missiles and, within a limited total number of squadrons, to deploy an equal number of squadrons of each.

AF Favors Thor

"From the testimony of Secretary Douglas, it is obvious to me that he has serious reservations as to the wisdom of deploying an equal number of squadrons of both the Thor and the Jupiter. While he has not stated the precise details of his thinking, it seems clear to me that he favors the Thor over the Jupiter, would like to have a greater number of Thor squadrons and a consequent reduction in the planned deployment of Jupiter squadrons, and that he proposes to make some recommendations to you on this matter within the next 10 days.

"There is available in your office a transcript of the testimony of February 7 covering this matter. I refer you to pages 1987 through 1990, when Secretary Douglas was questioned. I think that the attitude of Secretary Douglas is best indicated in his testimony on page 1990 when he stated in part: 'I indicated the program as it progresses tends to produce a desire to limit it to 1 missile and to save the money that could be saved by producing only 1 missile and training units for only 1 weapon.'

"On the basis of the foregoing, I would expect Secretary Douglas to make recommendations to you which would limit the deployment of the Jupiter squadrons to no more than 2, and perhaps only 1.

"This situation must be related to our current contractual commitments for the Jupiter as well as the Thor. As you know, the Army has let a production-line contract for the Jupiter to the Chrysler Corp., which contract involves an expenditure of approximately $30 million. At the same time, it is recognized that the Redstone Arsenal has some capability for the production of the Jupiter missile. The committee has previously received testimony which would indicate that we could obtain sufficient production of the Jupiter from the Redstone Arsenal to meet the missile requirements of 1 Jupiter squadron by a relatively early date in 1959.

Express Concern

"There is also some feeling that if this capability at Redstone Arsenal received maximum utilization that sufficient missiles for a second Jupiter squadron could be obtained from that source. It is the relation of this possibility to the testimony and current thinking of Secretary Douglas that causes me some concern.

"If there is any possibility that no more than 2 Jupiter squadrons will be deployed, and that sufficient missiles to equip those 2 squadrons could be obtained through maximum utilization of the capabilities at Redstone Arsenal, then I can see no justification for continuing the $30 million production contract with Chrysler Corp. On the other hand, if your decision to deploy more than two Jupiter squadrons remains firm, the production contract with Chrysler will clearly remain valid.

"While I would not presume to inject myself into a decision which is properly yours, the testimony to which I have herein referred clearly indicates to me that there is disagreement with your prevailing decision on this matter. Until this disagreement is resolved, it is obvious that the Redstone Arsenal will not know the nature of the requirements to be placed on it, the Chrysler Corp. cannot be sure whether or not it will be faced with the termination of its production contract, the Army will not know the full scope of its training requirement of Air Force personnel on the Jupiter missile, and there will continue to be Air Force reluctance in giving wholehearted support to the decision in its present form.

Sees Reluctance

"When you appeared before this committee on January 15, 1958, you reaffirmed your previous decision as to the number of Jupiter and Thor squadrons to be deployed. The production contract had already been let to Chrysler. In addition, neither the Jupiter nor the Thor had fully met all flight tests and, so far as I know, that remains the situation today. It is for this reason that I fail to understand the reluctance of the Air Force to give wholehearted support to the decision which you have already reached. But, since the reluctance obviously exists, I feel that I must express to you my complete readiness to support your decision. If this is simply a question of money, I want you to know that you will have my complete support in requesting whatever additional funds may be required to insure the deployment of the Jupiter squadrons. In the final analysis, service pride must bow to the overriding need of an IRBM capability at the earliest practicable date.

"With kindest personal regards, CARL VINSON."

COL. LESTER T. DAVID, USAF, receives the Commendation Ribbon from Air Force Vice Chief of Staff General Curtis E. LeMay (left) in Pentagon ceremonies. Colonel David was honored for his logistic support for the successful KC-135 jet Stratotanker record from Westover AFB, Mass., to Buenos Aires last November. The aircraft flew a distance of 6,300 miles non-stop.

Pentomic Concept Employed In 3d Army's "Lucky Charlie"; 32 Generals Take Part

The Army's latest pentomic concept, "concentrate to attack—disperse to live," played the major role for the 2300 participating active Army, National Guard and Reserve forces from the seven South-eastern States, in Exercise LUCKY CHARLIE completed recently at Ft. Gordon, Ga. The Third U. S. Army directed maneuver numbered 32 officers of general rank as participants, and observers.

The two-day map problem emphasized the latest atomic, electronic and radiological principles. Airborne doctrines were stressed as an airhead was established from the initial airhead already held deep behind enemy lines (LUCKY BRAVO—the map exercise held on this Post last year.)

Armor and infantry actions, along the conventional warfare lines, were also "played."

Helicopters and light Army aircraft were used on the map problem as the commanders made tactical shifts to counteract enemy moves.

The Commanding General of Third U. S. Army and Exercise Director, Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey emphasized that the commanders and their staffs represented approximately 266,000 troops as they fought to break away from the initial airhead established deep behind enemy lines (LUCKY BRAVO) and link-up with friendly forces.

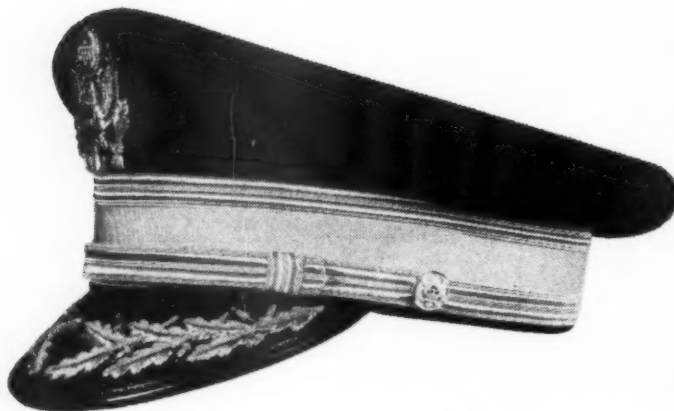

In the final critique Gen. Hickey complimented the participants on their tremendous preparatory efforts as well as their enthusiasm during the Exercise. He emphasized that the Exercise was a training vehicle and not a test of a unit's ability to operate.

"LUCKY CHARLIE has shown the smoothest operation of any similar type exercise I have attended," he said. "Next year's LUCKY DELTA will offer quite a challenge for the participants to show equal improvement."

'Buffalo Bill' Quinn To Pentagon In June

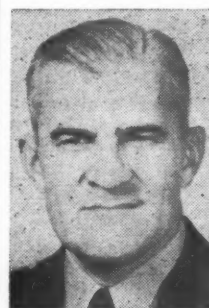

Maj. Gen. William W. Quinn, USA, commander of the 4th Infantry Division and Ft. Lewis, Wash., leaves in June for a Pentagon assignment with the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence.

The 50-year-old West Pointer, who has devoted much of his Army career to intelligence work, has received orders to report for the new assignment by 15 July. His replacement has not yet been announced.

General Quinn succeeded Maj. Gen. Paul L. Freeman at Ft. Lewis in January, 1957, three weeks after receiving his two-star rank at Ft. Carson, Colo., where he was assistant commander of the 9th Infantry Division.

The 1933 graduate of West Point won fame and the nickname "Buffalo Bill" as leader of the 17th Infantry Regiment during the Korean conflict. Battle feats of the "Buffalo herd" were in the news almost daily when his outfit spearheaded the United Nations 1951 counter attack on the Central Front.

General Quinn was born in Crisfield, Md. He and Mrs. Quinn have three children. Sally, 16, Donna, 14, and William, Jr., 11.

Now USAA will insure your Valuables anywhere in the world

Over the years we all accumulate valuable personal effects which, if destroyed or lost, would require considerable cash to replace. USAA, the non-profit insurance association serving the services since 1922, now offers a WORLD WIDE FLOATER to protect your household and personal effects.

This new policy is so inexpensive that no officer of the US Armed Forces can afford to be without the protection that it offers. The small cost of this policy is further reduced at year end when USAA returns a dividend, currently 27.5%.

With this new USAA WORLD WIDE FLOATER there are no geographical restrictions. There is no adjustment in premium because of change in location of your goods. You enjoy protection everywhere in the world.

The USAA WORLD WIDE FLOATER covers personal effects owned by you, your wife and dependent members of your family.

You are insured against the hazards of fire, lightning, windstorm, hail, explosion, riot and civil commotion, smoke or smudge, vehicle or aircraft damage, accidental escape of water and transportation hazards; also, theft, pilferage, larceny, burglary, robbery, holdup and embezzlement.

Capt. Houghton Named Navy Nurse Director

Capt. Ruth A. Houghton, NC, Chief, Nursing Service, U. S. Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md., will succeed retiring Capt. W. Leona Jackson, NC, as Director Navy Nurse Corps.

Captain Jackson, whose four year term ends 30 April, will end her Navy career at that time. A spokesman from the Director's Office said that the Captain will continue in the nursing profession in a civilian capacity.

Captain Houghton, born in Andover, Mass., graduated from the St. John's Hospital School of Nursing, Lowell, Mass., and received her Bachelor of Science in Nursing Education from Boston College. She won her Master of Science degree at The Catholic University, Washington, D. C.

The incoming Chief Nurse, who also will hold the title of Director, Nursing Division, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, entered the Nurse Corps on 1 June 1935, and was appointed to four-stripe rank on 17 October 1957.

She has served overseas in Panama, Australia, New Guinea, and Hawaii.

She is a member of the American Nurses Association, the National League for Nursing, the Association of Military Surgeons, Sigma Theta Tau, and Pi Gamma Mu.

Sub Goes Round World In 228 Days

The USS Gudgeon, commanded by LCdr. Thomas A. Bryce, is the first United States submarine to circumnavigate the globe.

Her Executive Officer is Lt. John O. Coppedge.

The Gudgeon began the first leg of her round-the-world journey on 8 July 1957 and returned to her home port at Pearl Harbor on 21 February, after steaming 23,111 miles.

As she tied up at the dock her 80-man crew was welcomed by a helicopter which dropped 30 pounds of exotic Hawaiian blossoms; hula girls swayed to the rhythm of "Aloha Oe" played by the Navy Band.

The history-making submarine was escorted to her berth by tugboats which sprayed the air with water from their fire hoses. Whistles and horns sounded in welcome to the sub.

The Gudgeon spent 150 days underway and 78 days in port.

Marine "Toys For Tots" Drive Aids One Million

More than one million underprivileged had their Christmas stockings filled last year as a result of the Marine Corps Reserves "Toys for Tots" program.

A consolidated report of Leatherneck Reserve Ground and Air units shows that the 1957 campaign was the greatest since the program was initiated in 1948.

Children in more than 225 cities and towns throughout the United States and Hawaii received Christmas presents as a result of the drive.

The Marine Reserve along with local civic groups each year collects and distributes toys to boys and girls from needy families. The toys are distributed in the towns in which a drive is conducted.

Amphib Commander

Capt. Charles L. Werts, USN, USNA '31, took command of Transportation Amphibious Squadron Eight 17 February in ceremonies aboard the Attack Transport Cambria at the Norfolk Naval Base, Va.

He reported to his new assignment from duty as Deputy Director of the Shore Establishment, Development and Maintenance Division, Office of the Chief of Naval Operations, Washington, D. C.

Captain Werts resides with his wife, Margaret, in Virginia Beach, Va.

USMC Redesignates

Machine Record Units

All Marine Corps Machine Records Installations are to be redesignated "Data Processing Installations" on 1 March.

Headquarters said the term "Data Processing" more clearly indicates the nature of the work now performed by MRI units. The term "Machine Records," it was said, often is misleading.

Facilities used for the operation of either or both electric and electronic data processing equipment will be known as "Data Processing Installations," with the word "section," "division," "platoon," etc., substituted for the word installation as appropriate, to fit the basic organization of which the installation is a part.

Marine Corps Picks 481 For Diamonds & Stars

The Marine Corps has chosen 481 six-stripe Staff NCO's for advancement to sergeant major and first sergeant.

Of the total number named, 130 will don the stars of sergeant major and 351 the diamonds of first sergeant.

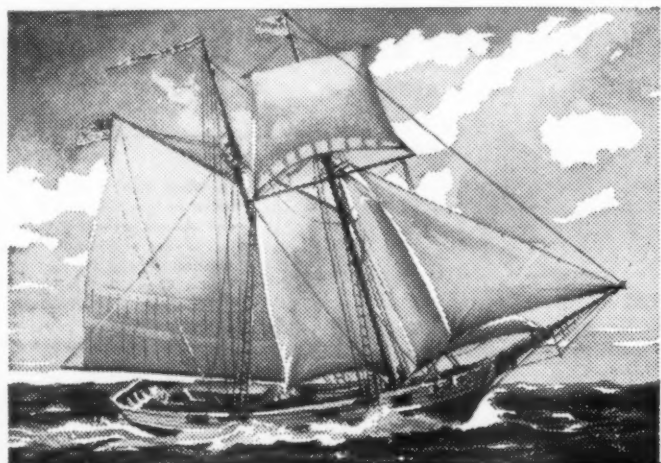

Marine Corps Headquarters said certificates of appointment are being drawn up by General Randolph McC. Pate, and that all selectees can expect to be promoted by the end of March.

The board, headed by Col. George C. Ruffin, jr., Commanding Officer, Marine Barracks, Naval Activities, Washington, D. C., considered master sergeants with two years in rank who made application through their commanding officers. All first sergeants were automatically considered for promotion to sergeant major.

At last count, the Marine Corps had 230 sergeants major and 449 first sergeants on active duty.

Last year's board chose 163 for stars and 400 for diamonds.

In the first year of the program—late 1955—the Marine Corps selected 93 for sergeant major and 154 for first sergeant.

LOW COST PROTECTION. One of the first in a long line of distinguished U.S. ships, was the MASSACHUSETTS. Built in Newburyport, Mass. in 1791. Weighing 70 tons and costing $1000 dollars she protected America's Coast.

Eighty-eight years later, NAVY MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION was founded. The purpose was to give low cost protection to members of the Navy, Marines, Coast Guard, and their families. For SEVENTY-NINE YEARS NMA has continued to provide this LOW COST PROTECTION.

Navy Kills Blue Collar For Summer Jumper

The Navy will not adopt an enlisted dress white jumper with blue collar and cuffs in time for wear this Summer.

In fact, the Navy said, "unless something revolutionary comes along in the dye field, the proposed cotton jumper never will be adopted."

The decision to reject the blue and white jumper follows reports by Fleet units which wear-tested the item. It was found that the dark blue dye "bleeds" into the white when the jumper is laundered.

The Navy said that the most advanced dyes available from industry were used in the manufacture of the test summer garb.

A wear test of the uniform was approved because the recommendation "represented a considerable body of Fleet opinion."

• Limit tours in the Joint Staff to three years.

Congressmen Vinson, Arends, and Kil-day held a joint press conference to explain their action.

They said the proposed changes are "intended to provide a more streamlined organization of the Department of Defense" by "removing administrative confusion" that now "impede and obstruct decision-making by the Secretary of Defense."

Witnesses testifying before the Committee during its investigation of military missile programs (just completed) charged over and over again that most of the obstruction and delay they have encountered at the Pentagon stem from action originating in the offices of the Assistant Secretaries of Defense, the Defense Department Comptroller and the Bureau of the Budget.

In reply to a question, Chairman Vinson noted that his committee has no juisdiction over the Budget Bureau.

Chairman Vinson said a Special Armed Services Subcommittee on Reorganization of the Department of Defense, headed by Congressman Kilday, will begin hearings on the reorganization plan about 1 April, or as soon as it completes its present hearings on the military pay bill.

Under the proposed reorganization, the Defense Department and the three military departments would be authorized a Secretariat totaling 15 members as opposed to the present 29.

The Assistant Secretaries of Defense to be eliminated under the plan are those charged with Public Affairs, International Security Affairs, Health and Medical Affairs, Supply and Logistics and Properties and Installations. In addition, the Defense Department General Counsel, who now has the status of an assistant secretary, would be relegated to the position of "Special Assistant" to the Secretary of Defense.

There also would be established "Special Assistants" for Public Affairs and for Legislation.

The new Assistant Secretary of Defense for Materiel Requirements, to be created by the proposal, would take over the duties of the Assistant Secretaries for Supply and Logistics and for Property and Installations.

The Assistant Secretaries to be eliminated from the Army, Navy and Air Force were not designated by specific title.

The three members of the Armed Services Committee pointed out that their proposed legislation will bring the Military Departments into "closer relationship with defense planning by providing that the Secretaries of the Military Departments shall be members of the National Security Council.

They said the change "will further integrate our military capabilities with broad national strategy."

The proposal also restricts the function of the Comptroller of the Defense Department and sets limits on his authority with respect to military planning.
It specifically precludes the Comptroller from exercising any supervision, control or judgment over the military justifications for programs and requirements of the Military Departments.

The three House members pointed out that the proposal does not affect fiscal responsibilities of the Comptroller.

The sponsors said a "significant feature" of the reorganization proposal is the provision which limits OSD civilian employees to 600. This move, they said,
"not only eliminates 1,800 civilian positions, but undoubtedly will eliminate an unknown number of ad hoc committees."

The three Congressmen said their plan
"strengthens and tightens the control of the Joint Chiefs of Staff over the Unified Commands by giving the Joint Chiefs of Staff responsibility not only for establishment of unified commands but also for assignment and withdrawal of forces, designation of geographic boundaries and the necessary coordination between such commands."

They said, "This will have the effect of enhancing operational efficiency of the unified commands and stabilizing the assignment of forces composing them. It will have the beneficial effect of leaving no doubt as to where the lines of responsibility and authority are with respect to our forces."

In addition, they noted, the bill strengthens the JCS "by providing the legal encouragement and authority for them to delegate to the Vice Chiefs of Staff in the Army and the Air Force, the Vice Chief of Naval Operations in the Navy, and the Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps in the Marine Corps, many of the details of administration."

The joint announcement said this step
"will permit the uniformed Service Chiefs greater freedom to engage in strategic planning" but "will in no way separate the uniformed chief of any Service from his position as the head of his Service."

They said it also "will assure the effective continuation of that indispensable attribute of the Joint Chiefs of Staff system, the combination of authority to plan with responsibility to execute those plans, which results from having Service chiefs serving as members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

The proposal also limits tours in the Joint Staff to three years, except in time of war declared by Congress. The sponsors said this provision has two purposes: "First, it will prevent the creation of a self-perpetuating clique of special staff officers who would be increasingly isolated from combat realities. Second, it will provide for an in-flow of current and realistic military experience to the Joint Staff and an out-flow to the operational commands of officers experienced in military planning at the national level."

In substance, they said, the bill calls for reorganizational changes which will improve national security by providing a defense system "that exposes rather than conceals problems, and facilitates rather than impedes decisions."

Plan Battleships For Missile Logistics Duty; Dreadnaught Would Also Fill Tanker Role

From first page—

"A" stands for auxiliary; the "O" for petroleum products; and, the "E" for ammunition.

Admiral Johnson said such a ship would permit a Task Force to remain on station approximately three times as long as it can at the present time.

He pointed out that the Atomic-Age Task Force is spread over an area of about 300 miles. The cruisers are generally deployed about 50 to 60 miles away from the carrier they protect, while the destroyers are 15 to 20 miles away.

If an "AOE" were attached to the Task Force, she would be able to steam to the supporting ships to supply them with fuel, aviation gasoline and missiles.

This means that the protecting ships would not have to pull in close to the carrier and weaken the "defense in depth." In other words, there would be no gaps in defense since all ships in the Task Force would be able to remain in their assigned areas.

At the same time, the Admiral said, the Navy is thinking in terms of the "AOE" in conjunction with another ship which could transport supplies from ship to ship while a task force was under way.

This could be achieved, he indicated, by helicopters moving from the deck of an old aircraft carrier. However, he emphasized, the plans to convert an obsolete carrier are not yet far advanced.

Will Issue ARDC Improved 'Chute Soon

The Air Force will shortly put into service an improved parachute which enables jet pilots to eject safely at low altitudes.

The new "Guide Personnel" parachute, accepted as standard equipment, was developed by the Air Research and Development Command.

Tests conducted by ARDC scientists and technicians, Air Force officials said, proved that with the new chute, pilots could eject in perfect safety from fast flying jets even while streaking down a runway.

Project engineer for the new parachute was CWO I. Rosenberg of the Air Force Flight Test Center, Edwards AFB, Calif. A shortcoming of the 28-foot diameter canopy 'chute was that the canopy blossomed quickly with a resultant bone-jarring shock to the parachutist.

ARDC researchers fabricated a quarter bag deployment system, strengthened the 'chute bridle and main canopy, then incorporated an automatic time delay release to slow the pilot's fall prior to parachute opening. The lower edge of the canopy was scalloped to give the pilot greater control over his descent.

AF Academy Names Library Advisors, Aims For 250,000 Volume Collection

Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, Superintendent of the U. S. Air Force Academy, has announced appointment of five librarians and educators to serve as members of the Academy Library Advisory Group.

The group includes Dr. Howard W. Barlow, Director of the Institute of Technology at the State College of Washington; Dr. Charles M. Davis, Chairman, Department of Geography, University of Michigan; Dr. Herman H. Fussler, Director of the University of Chicago Library; Dr. Vernon D. Tate, Professor-Librarian, U. S. Naval Academy; and

Dr. Eugene H. Wilson, Dean of Faculties, University of Colorado.

The Academy Library, one of the fastest growing academic libraries, opened in August 1955 with 500 books, now has 61,000 and will eventually have a collection of 250,000 volumes. Last year it circulated 33,946 books. It subscribes to 939 periodicals and 70 daily newspapers in order to keep its users up-to-date not only on world affairs but back-home happenings as well.

The Director of the Academy Library since June 1956 has been Lt. Col. George V. Fagan.

FlyTAF To Be Discontinued; M/G Spicer Given Command Of 17th AF In Africa

MAJ. GEN. RUSS SPICER, commander of the Flying Training Air Force at Randolph AFB, Tex., will assume command of the 17th Air Force in North Africa in June.

General Spicer's present FlyTAF command is scheduled to be discontinued on 1 April, with Air Training Command headquarters taking over direct supervision of FlyTAF's 27 bases.

As commander of the 17th, General Spicer will succeed Maj. Gen. Richard J. O'Keefe, who is being reassigned to USAF headquarters as Deputy Inspector General for Security.

The 17th has jurisdiction over U. S. Air Force bases in North Africa, Italy, Greece, Turkey and Pakistan. Its headquarters are located at Wheelus Air Base, near Tripoli, Libya.

His new assignment will mark General Spicer's third tour of duty in the European theatre. During World War II he led a fighter group in England. Shot down on his 14th combat mission, he was captured by the Germans and imprisoned at Barth, Germany, for 14 months. Sentenced to death for making a pep talk to fellow prisoners of war, he escaped execution when Allied troops liberated the prison camp on the day on which he was scheduled to be shot.

ATC Reorganization Drops TTAf & FlyTAF

Elimination of the Flying Training Air Force and Technical Training Air Force has been tentatively set at 1 April and 1 June, respectively.

The roles of the two training air forces will be taken over by the Air Training Command, Randolph AFB, Tex., headed by Lt. Gen. Charles T. Myers.

Reorganizing ATC headquarters to perform the new functions will require no additional construction at Randolph, present home of ATC and FlyTAF Headquarters. The reorganized headquarters is expected to utilize space now occupied by the two organizations.

Selected military and civilian personnel of the training air forces will be assigned to ATC Headquarters on the basis of skills necessary for its operation.

The amalgamation will cut approximately 150 officer, 140 airmen and 260 civilian spaces assigned to ATC. The strength of the reorganized headquarters will equal that presently assigned to ATC and FlyTAF headquarters combined.

Persons who have a predicted retainability of less than two years at ATC Headquarters, considering service retention and overseas vulnerability, will not normally be considered for transfer, ATC officials said. Those "frozen" for schools and vulnerable for overseas assignment will be held at Randolph and Keesler AFB's.

Personnel not selected for assignment with ATC Headquarters will be transferred to other bases within the command.

Gen. Luehman Hails AF Base Editors

Public recognition for the editors of top Air Force base newspapers was made 25 February at the Air Force Association's Jet Age Conference in Washington, D. C., by Maj. Gen. Arno Luehman, Director of Information Services.

General Luehman began an address to a luncheon session of a Missile Seminar for Industry, by introducing the following editors of top Air Force papers, which the ISO Chief described as "an important aid to command management."

Harold M. Frankel—"U.K. Eagle," Third Air Force, South Ruislip, England.

M/Sgt. Robert B. MacEnery, "Beacon," March AFB, Calif.

T/Sgt. Thomas C. Grigsby, "Tiger Talk," England AFB, La.

T/Sgt. Richard G. R. Griffith, "Global Ranger," Travis AFB, Calif.

M/Sgt. William H. Schaeffer, "Phalsbourg Falcon," Phalsbourg AB, Moselle, France.

At a Pentagon ceremony later in the week, the editors were awarded special plaques.

AF Marksman At Lackland

Lt. Col. Elmo Reeves, USAF, has joined the group of experts at the Marksmanship Center, Lackland AFB, Tex. He was formerly commander of the 3108th Communication Group, Rome, N. Y.

The Center was developed from an idea of General Curtis E. LeMay, Air Force Vice Chief of Staff, to develop a hard core of shooting coaches within the Air Force to train airmen in all types of personal weapons.

CAPABILITIES . . . Manpower, Tools and Experience

Beechcraft MA-3 . . . One unit provides electric power, air conditioning, air pressure, towing

Save manpower, time, and multiple equipment expense with the Beechcraft MA-3:

ELECTRIC POWER TO SPARE There's ample power to provide for "big aircraft" service. Twenty-eight kilowatts DC and 45 kilowatts AC are available.

BIG 13-TON AIR CONDITIONER Vitally necessary cooling for electronic equipment ground checks is available from the MA-3's modern air cycle unit.

HIGH HEATING CAPACITY Meets all cold weather heating requirements.

EXTRA LARGE GAS TURBINE COMPRESSOR Hot weather is never a problem. This compressor provides fast air-power starts for the largest jet engines.

EXTRA TOWING POWER Has 12,500 pounds draw-bar pull which can be increased by adding to the vehicle's gross weight.

EASY-TO-HANDLE SPEED With four-wheel power steering, torque converter transmission, four-wheel drive, and "no spin" differentials, the MA-3 maneuvers smoothly and easily at speeds up to 45 miles per hour.

MODULAR DESIGN Major service units are in "modular" packages—can be quickly removed and replaced as complete units to prevent service delays and costly "down time."

Sound Personnel Management. It is now evident from THE JOURNAL's survey of the House Subcommittee members that the Service pay bill which will come out of the House Armed Services Committee will be quite different from both the draft offered by the Department of Defense and the recommendations made by the Cordiner Committee. As related in the article on the first page of this issue, most of the changes favored by the Congressmen represent steps forward for the Services.

For example, the cost of living increase, opposed by Mr. Cordiner, will, it appears, not only be retained but will be extended to take in the otherwise ignored retired list. Furthermore, the Committee members generally agree that if the Cordiner increases are desirable there is little reason to phase them in gradually. Why not put them into effect at once? ask some of the members. Thus this part of the plan may veer more closely to the original Cordiner recommendations.

Meanwhile, with the House Subcommittee well along on its series of witnesses and nearing the end of its open sessions, the Senate subcommittee, appointed last Summer, has started hearings on both the Administration's bill and the original Cordiner draft.

Significantly, Senator Stennis, Chairman of the Subcommittee, warned at the outset of the hearings that "the soundness of the management program will determine in large part the success of the proposed pay plan." The Chairman announced that he wants the Department to advise the Subcommittee in detail of what it proposes to do administratively and what other legislation it will recommend to bring about a revised manpower management program aimed to raise the level of retention and advancement of the most highly qualified personnel. Senator Stennis further cautioned that "in the absence of an affirmative plan of improvement, pay legislation will most probably have a very difficult path."

Observers at the Senate hearings noted with interest that the Senators made frequent references to points that had come up in the House hearings, indicating a close liaison between the two groups on this important problem. Thus if the two committees continue to work closely together it will forestall any serious differences when their bills go to conference, and thus assure an easier passage.

The thoroughness and seriousness with which the members of both House and Senate Subcommittees are approaching the problem is heartening to the Services and gives promise of the ultimate enactment of a helpful bill.

Reorganize Defense Department. The guard-statement made by Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy upon his return from his secluded Puerto Rican conference with his reorganization consultants, together with the comprehensive plan being sponsored by leading members of the House Armed Services Committee (see story on first page), point the way to certain rather firm conclusions as to what most likely will come out of the current demand for a more efficient organization of our defense administration.

First, it would seem that there will be no overall single military commander. Mr. McElroy indicated that the thinking of his group at the Ramey Air Force Base hide-away did not go along those lines. The House Group headed by Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee and including two leading members of his committee from both political parties—Representatives Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.) and Leslie J. Arends (R-Ill.)—likewise steered clear of the single military chief. Instead the Congressmen

"The Army and Navy Journal is established in the interest of no party; it will be controlled by no clique. Its independence will be absolute. Avoiding all personal and political bias, its influence will be directed solely to the inculcation of sound military ideas, and to the elevation of the public service in all its departments."—From Vol. 1, No. 1, Army and Navy Journal, August 29, 1863.

SATURDAY, 1 MARCH 1958

advocate that the Joint Chiefs of Staff be given stronger and tighter control over the unified military commands in this country and overseas. To lessen the burden on the Service chiefs who are members of the JCS, Representative Vinson's group would give them the authority to delegate to their vice chiefs many of the administrative details within their respective services.

Secondly, there will be a slimming down in all echelons of the civilian administration of the Department. In this respect the House members are advocating a reduction that goes considerably further than Mr. McElroy and his consultants probably will recommend to the President. Mr. Vinson and his associates want to eliminate 14 of the Under Secretaries and Assistant Secretaries in the Department of Defense and the three military departments and to cut the present number of civilian positions in the Department of Defense from about 2,400 to 600—which would mean dropping three out of four employees.

The Congressional plan may appear drastic but there is much to commend it. The secretariat and the number of employees have expanded far beyond that contemplated when the Department was organized. In fact, a major complaint of witnesses representing both the military and industry was that the surplus of officials, sub-officials, assistant officials and their collective entities in the form of standing committees and ad hoc committees, constitute a most difficult bar to decisions and action. So many individuals and groups have to study and make recommendations on any plan submitted by the working agencies that interminable delays result. Furthermore, only a few of them have the final power to say "yes," the others can only make recommendations and hold up action.

Chairman Vinson has designated Representative Kilday as chairman of a subcommittee to go into the reorganization problem and told him to start sessions about 1 April. Secretary McElroy, meanwhile, has said that his report will be ready for the President sometime this month, which makes it possible for the Administration's plan to be before the Kilday subcommittee when it convenes. There is every possibility, therefore, that a simplified, streamlined system may fall upon the Department of Defense at this session of Congress.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (28 Feb. 1948)—Almost unique among military organizations is the problem facing the newly organized U. S. Air Force whereby it has many more vacancies authorized in the upper grades than it can logically fill. This was first evidenced in the report of the board to select general officers, when only 30 major generals and 51 brigadier generals were named instead of filling the 75 vacancies the law allows in each of these grades.

50 Years Ago (29 Feb. 1908)—If Congress cannot persuade itself to vote a modest increase in the pay of the officers of our military Services it might at least grant to officers, as it does to enlisted men, the privilege of depositing their savings with paymasters and drawing interest thereon.

90 Years Ago (29 Feb. 1868)—For the first time in the history of the Republic its Chief Magistrate suffers the disgrace of impeachment of high crimes and misdemeanors. . . . The duty of the Officers of the Army and Navy at this juncture is clear. It is to stand aloof from the whole controversy, in their official capacity, whatever may be their private and political sympathies.

Regular IA's

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

From 1948 to 1956 some 5,000 officers were given regular commissions under the Officer Personnel Act of 1947; however, service prior to 1 January 1948 could not be credited in computing rank. Most officers accepted this loss of service figuring things probably would even out in the long run.

However, in 1956 the Armed Forces Regular Officer Augmentation Act was passed providing for the computation of active commissioned service from 7 December 1941. The Air Force portion provides for the recomputation of service of the previously commissioned officer back to Pearl Harbor Day. The Army refused to include this provision, citing its determination to eliminate the "hump" of officers with service credit in the middle ranks.

Initially, under the latest Act, the Army gave regular commissions to a number of junior reserve officers, limiting credit for prior active commissioned service. This wasn't so bad. Now, however, the Army recently gave to reserve officers 636 regular commissions of captain through colonel. More are planned.

To most of the Army officers who won regular commissions under the exacting and highly competitive system established under the 1947 law, this latest program of the Army represents a raw inequity. This newest program directly controverts the Army's explanation that it is attempting to iron out the excessive number of regular officers in the middle ranks. Worse, it means that for no reason than that they saw fit to earn regular commissions in the critical years of 1948 through 1955, thousands of officers, already behind their contemporaries in age and service, who received regular commissions prior to 1948, suffer further loss of rank and face dimmer prospects of regular promotion.

It is hoped that Congress in its next session will see fit to enact legislation to correct this glaring inequity.

MAJOR, JAGC

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I should like to express my appreciation for the article on this Agency which appeared in the 1 February 1958 issue of THE JOURNAL. I am sure that both your military and civilian readers will now have a better understanding of the functions of the Military Petroleum Supply Agency and its place in the supply of petroleum to the military services.

As a reader of THE JOURNAL for many years I feel that certainly you have earned your motto as "Spokesman of the Services." Please accept my sincere wish for your continued success in rendering this valuable service.

SecDef. McElroy Stresses "Merit-Proficiency"

SECRETARY of Defense Neil H. McElroy launched the Pentagon pay raise presentation before a Senate Armed Services Subcommittee 25 February with the assertion that "in my judgment this is of key importance to our defense now and in the years to come."

Sec'y McElroy

Restating the case he made before the House Armed Services Subcommittee, Secretary McElroy told the Senate group:

"The revised pay bill is built on a compensation plan which is intended to encourage qualified men in both enlisted grades and officer grades to look favorably on the military as a career opportunity. The increased emphasis it puts on merit and proficiency will make us better able to attract and retain good personnel at all levels."

Secretary McElroy said: "The kind of man we are seeking to attract has confidence in his ability, and is more than willing to have his success in life depend on his ability to demonstrate intelligence and initiative. He is looking for an opportunity to advance on his merits, and to receive recognition on the basis of his performance rather than his length of time on the job."

6% Increase "Well Merited"

THE House Armed Services Kilday Subcommittee was told by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker that notwithstanding recent progress in the career attractiveness field, the manpower retention problem "remains critical."

Testifying after Mr. Ralph J. Cordiner had attacked the 6% across-the-board increase for those with at least two years service, Mr. Brucker said such an adjustment "gives a well merited cost of living increase to those who otherwise do not benefit under proposed pay scales."

Secretary Brucker told the Subcommittee that the pending legislation, with its modifications of the original Cordiner proposals, "provides the essentials of what is required in this area. If legislation is to have the desired effect on retention," he said, "it will have to produce a major impact on personnel. The effect of this legislation will be largely dissipated unless our personnel get a strong impression that they are to receive truly substantial benefits."

It was interesting that Mr. Cordiner, for the very same reasons stated by Secretary Brucker, criticized the decision to phase officer and warrant officer increases over four years. This would tend to reduce the impact of the pay legislation, said Mr. Cordiner.

Sec'y Brucker

"We Simply Cannot Afford" Turnover

DECLARING that the Navy has become "unbelievably complex . . . you name it, we have it," Secretary Thomas S. Gates, Jr., said that "in both a monetary and military sense, we simply cannot afford" the loss of trained manpower "for lack of an enlightened pay policy."

Sec'y Gates

Secretary Gates declared that "without the right kind of people, intelligent, devoted and well trained, everything else is nothing."

He told the Subcommittee "it is not fair, it is not intelligent" to make people who love the Navy "choose between the Navy and a reasonable standard of living for their families, a standard that they would have little trouble achieving in civil life."

Secretary Gates maintained that the pay proposals "are not a panacea for all military problems—but I think them essential to our military vigor. In all earnestness, I think the time for action is now, and that the action you take should be full and complete."

Gens. Had More Buying Power As '39 Capt.-Majs.

SECRETARY of the Air Force James H. Douglas pointed up his appeal for pay legislation that would assure a Professional Force with the assertion that "our higher ranking officers are grossly underpaid when one considers the tremendous responsibilities they have for the defense and security of the country."

He reported to the Kilday Subcommittee that "our general officers are not as well off today, in terms of buying power, as they were in 1939 when they were captains or majors."

Secretary Douglas said: "The Air Force has an urgent need for a system of compensation designed to attract quality and to provide a more realistic level of pay for responsibilities assumed."

He said that in Air Force missile wings three out of every four officers and more than six out of every 10 enlisted men must be technicians.

Said Secretary Douglas: "We don't need more people in uniform. We need more skilled people."

Stressing the need for the higher pay at the top ranks, Secretary Douglas said: "Ambitious young men are not likely to be attracted by a career that pays a competitive salary only in its early stages and offers relatively little increase in living standards with increased grade and responsibility." What is needed, he said, is a compensation system designed "to provide incentive for capable young men to choose the Air Force as a career and to strive for advancement to positions of greater responsibility knowing that the rewards will be worth the effort. Only when we can retain our personnel," he said, "can we get the benefits of sound management in selection and assignment."

Sec'y Douglas

The Chiefs Speak; Pay No. 1 Problem

THE Joint Chiefs of Staff, led by their Chairman, General Nathan F. Twining, USAF, have told Congress of the urgent need for enactment of the military pay bill. In the words of General Twining, this is a defense need which should be put "at the very top of the priority list—in the number one spot."

The JCS Chairman said the Chiefs may disagree over some priorities in the defense effort, but they are unanimous in their viewpoint about the top priority of a solution to the manpower problem.

"Military hardware, no matter how devastating—or plentiful—is useless without trained, skilled manpower and leaders," General Twining told the House Armed Services Subcommittee. "It is a simple fact," he said, "that we are losing trained officers and men at an undesirable—and expensive—rate. Steps must be taken to reverse this trend—steps which I rate even ahead of missiles, airplanes and atomic missiles."

General Twining

USMA Resignations Hit Record Rate

GENERAL MAXWELL D. TAYLOR revealed that the resignation rate for the USMA '54 class will reach 27 per cent by the end of the next fiscal year—"a higher five year rate than in any other like period in recent times."

The Chief of Staff said only about 17 per cent of young Army officers are remaining in Service upon completion of obligated tours, compared with a 35 per cent requirement.

He added that the Army also is failing to retain sufficient numbers of quality enlisted personnel for career service, emphasizing that "the Army cannot do its job with inferior or mediocre people."

General Taylor declared: "We can no longer accept WWII standards and simply do the best with what we happen to have. As the Army progresses in the quality of its weapons and equipment it must progress in the quality of its people as well. We are not getting that essential personnel quality today."

Navy Could Save 13,000 Men

ADMIRAL ARLEIGH BURKE was equally specific in describing the impact on combat capability and manning levels of the current turnover rates. He said that by checking losses and reducing training requirements, the Navy could perform its present missions with 13,000 fewer men over a four year period if satisfactory retention rates are achieved.

The Chief of Naval Operations revealed that the Navy is "critically short" of junior officers in the 3-12 year service group, being forced to operate with a deficit of 3000 line lieutenants in surface ships. Naval Aviation, he said, is handicapped by the fact that only three out of seven aviators extend beyond their obligated service.

In the enlisted area, said Admiral Burke, the Navy is showing only a 15 per cent first term reenlistment rate.

On the effects of retention on safety, Admiral Burke noted that Anti-Submarine Squadron 31, operating from the USS Antietam with a 100 per cent allowance of experienced personnel flew over 2000 hours with 1200 carrier landings without any aircraft accident involving complete losses or fatalities. By comparison, nine other similar squadrons manned through normal personnel distribution had nine accidents.

AF Endorses Cordiner, Seeks Changes

GENERAL THOMAS D. WHITE told the Subcommittee that the Air Force "has consistently supported the Cordiner Committee Recommendations because we have felt they were sound in principle and offered the kind of a management concept we need now as well as tomorrow."

In his prepared statement, the Air Force Chief of Staff was more explicit than the other Chiefs in proposing changes to the pending legislation.

General White said the phase-in feature which would space officer and warrant officer benefits over four years "dilutes its effectiveness." He added that "the rates in the top grades are somewhat less than we feel are needed."

The Air Force Chief pointed out that "there is no provision for an upward adjustment of rental allowances," and said that these are now 28 per cent behind the cost of living index.

"I also feel strongly," said General White, "that provisions for retired personnel should be made, perhaps in separate legislation."

He said the Air Force supports the Cordiner proposals for "merit rather than mere length of service," and mentioned also "the need for additional compensation for remote and isolated duty."

The Subcommittee was told that the Air Force believes "the increased costs of the new military pay system reflected in the bill before you today will be amortized many times over in the years to come through increased efficiency, lower training requirements, and less aircraft and equipment attrition."

Marine Commandant Seeks Change

GENERAL Randolph McC. Pate, Commandant of the Marine Corps, says the pay legislation should be amended to provide an extra "longevity step-in-grade" for E-2, E-3 and possibly E-4.

He explained that the enlisted rank distribution of the Corps is different from the other Services "and as a result the average Marine spends longer in each grade than do the average members of the other Services."

General Pate noted that "our structure provides for a higher percentage of men in the lower ranks and a smaller number in the higher ranks—that is, more junior men and fewer senior men than the other Services have. Additionally," he added, "with us E-3 is the pay grade of a Corporal. A Marine corporal is a non-commissioned officer, and he is given leadership and management responsibilities early in his career."

memo

SECDEF McELROY'S EDUCATION is continuing, his pay legislation testimony discloses. He admitted that as head of Procter & Gamble, he was less alarmed about the loss of skilled military manpower than is now the case. He said he once thought that the impact of the losses was eased by the fact that the technicians from the Services were utilizing those skills in industry and were thereby contributing to defense. Now he has learned that only about 1 out of 4 use military skills in their civilian positions—with a 75 per cent loss to defense potential.

APPROVAL OF THE PAY BILL now before Congress could be followed by recall to active duty for a limited number of top-ranking officers for critical assignments, possibly as consultants. In view of the fact that the pay measure would provide substantial benefits for senior retired officers who serve on active duty for a year or more, President Eisenhower, it is felt, would be less reluctant to ask a handful of top officers—perhaps Admiral Radford and General Gruenther—to return to active duty for limited periods.

MORE THAN 20,000 ENLISTED MARINE Reservists who are receiving drill pay or retirement points are unfit for combat duty, according to information just made available at Headquarters. This is out of a total of 42,500 enlisted Marine Ready Reservists. Washington has ordered District Reserve Directors to do everything possible to remedy this situation. A big problem, however, is that thousands of the Ready Reservists are in this category because of "obligated service," and there isn't much the Marines can do to force satisfactory participation.

THE LACK OF READINESS among Ready Reserves is by no means exclusively a Marine Corps problem. The Leatherneck situation is duplicated in all the Services.

THERE'S NO QUESTION that the Department of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff have been avoiding a hard look at the Reserve Forces program. When SecDef McElroy completes current reviews on the overall DoD organization, it's likely he will turn his attention to the Reserve situation as a matter of high priority.

A FOUNDERING CAMPAIGN is under way to restore the historic warship Constellation, now at a pier in Baltimore, Md. A nation-wide funds drive to date has collected $56,698 in donations and pledges, but has incurred expenses of $66,230. This is a deficit of $9,532. The Baltimore, Md., Sun headlines the effort as a "Sinking Fund."

A FORMER NAVAL OFFICER, Horace G. Underwood III, who was born in Seoul in 1917, has been named Air Force Advisor for Community Relations in Korea.

THE AIR FORCE ASSOCIATION'S Missile Seminar for Industry in Washington, D. C., 25 February, in advance of the AFA Jet Age Conference, drew 386 participants from 171 companies. The seminar followed the pattern of a December session on missiles for newsmen, which attracted more than 200 reporters from 47 cities. The seminars are part of AFA's vigorous program to expand the Nation's understanding of missiles.

CONGRESSIONAL CRITICISM over the number of officers with colonel rank appears to be less severe this year than in the past—a reflection of the recognition of increased technical requirements and the fact that the percentage of higher ranking officers and noncommissioned officers always is up when force levels are down. During WWII, the Services had 14,800 colonels out of about 12,000,000 in uniform. At present, there are 14,340 officers who wear eagles.

OBLIGATED TOURS for Service Academy graduates may be extended. The Navy now requires four years, the Army and Air Force, three years. General Taylor has told the Kilday Subcommittee in the House that the Army is "seriously considering" a four-year requirement. His remark came with disclosure of record resignation rates. General White indicated the Air Force would like a five-year obligation. Good guess is that the Services will standardize on four years.

COAST GUARD OFFICIALS are pleased at an 18 per cent increase in applications for the Academy at New London, Conn., over 1957. Examinations were held 24-25 February. Results will be known early next month. Approximately 2,000 participated in the test.

THERE'S A DISPARITY in current authorizations for top three graders in the Services. The Air Force is allowed 55% of enlisted strength in the E-5, E-6 and E-7; the Navy, 53.5%; Army, 49%, and the Marine Corps, 37.5%.

THE ADMINISTRATION'S EFFORT to bolster confidence in the economy likely will see an early step-up in Pentagon announcements of defense contract awards. The impact of contracts always is greater when these are put out in Washington, instead of being allowed to dribble out by various Service agencies.

CONGRESSIONAL ACTION to raise the debt limit will permit Defense officials to move full speed ahead in making firm contract announcements. There is little question that the debt ceiling was a primary reason for the pre-Sputnik restriction of military spending.

ARMY ENTHUSIASTS, in their most hopeful moments, could not possibly have anticipated prior to the start of this session of Congress the forceful support their missile and anti-missile-missile efforts have received from Chairman Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee (Page 3). If the Army succeeds in the next weeks in orbiting a new and heavier satellite, Mr. Vinson's demands for accelerating the Jupiter IRBM program will be greatly strengthened.

ARMY SKYCAV UNITS, which provoked a dispute with the Air Force, are being redesignated Aerial Combat Reconnaissance Units. The Army Aviation Center, Ft. Rucker, Ala., is designing the ACRU groups, which include rocket-firing helicopters. The Army air units will provide surveillance, reconnaissance and counter-reconnaissance, much like oldtime cavalry outfits.

SAC'S INTERNAL PRESS SERVICE is distributing recent remarks by Admiral Burke that "we in the Navy recognize that the final decision in a war comes from the infantryman." SAC also published, without comment, the CNO's assertion that "wars cannot be controlled by weapons of 'mass destruction.' "

Will Ask More Funds For Missiles, B-58

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy disclosed 26 February that he plans to ask Congress for authority to spend additional funds for several high priority military programs.

He told the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee he will send a new request to Congress in the next few weeks.

The Secretary said he will ask for funds to:

• Step up the Army's NIKE-ZEUS anti-missile missile program.

• Augment and accelerate the Navy's Polaris program.

The Secretary appeared before the committee at the request of Chairman Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) to outline steps he has taken to put into effect recommendations recently made by the subcommittee.

He indicated the Pentagon soon may reach a decision to continue production of B-52 bombers and KC-135 jet tankers. The production of B-52s is scheduled to end in December. A final decision will be made during March, Mr. McElroy said.

ARC Spends Most On Services, Vets

Services to the Armed Forces and veterans are the most expensive activities of the Red Cross, according to General Alfred M. Grunther, USA-Ret., National President.

Last year, General Grunther said, the Red Cross spent more than $35.7 million on this group of programs. This was in addition to the high cost of disaster aid which in the last two-and-a-half years cost $56 million and wiped out the organization's disaster reserves.

Because of the long series of disasters, unprecedented in the organization's 77-year history, General Grunther explained, this year is a critical one for the Red Cross.

Top civilian and military leaders joined him in urging for the annual Red Cross fund and membership appeal opening 1 March.

SecDef Praises Red Cross

Secretary of Defense Neil McElroy hailed the Red Cross and its workers for their usefulness in peace and war. "The American Red Cross plays a key role in our nation in disaster," he said. "Its organization and its training program furnish a reservoir of skilled technicians who will be available should war again be forced upon us."

"It is to our great interest that the Red Cross drive for funds be successful so that its training program and organization be maintained and strengthened," Mr. McElroy concluded.

First Meeting In Izmir—

The newly organized Halfsee Officers' Wives Auxiliary held its first meeting at Landsoutheast Headquarters in Izmir, Turkey recently with over 100 wives of Turkish, Greek, British and United States officers in attendance.

Mrs. W. P. Lunn-Rockcliffe, wife of Lt. Col. Lunn-Rockcliffe, British Army was chosen President. Honorary President is Mrs. Paul D. Harkins, wife of Lieutenant General Harkins, USA. Honorary Vice Presidents are Mrs. A. Guvenc, Mrs. W. C. Bullock, and Mrs. M. Alexandrakis wives of Major General Guvenc, Turkish Army, Brigadier General Bullock, USA, and Brigadier General Alexandrakis, Hellenic Army, respectively.

The club, the first organization of NATO officers wives in Izmir, will initiate a program of participation in social welfare and cultural activities.

Aero Medical Wives Wing—

Plans for an interesting and varied program have been completed for the annual meeting of the Wives Wing of the Aero Medical Association, which will be held at the Statler Hotel, Washington, D. C., on 24, 25, 26 March. This seventh Wives' Wing meeting will be held concurrently with the 29th convention of its parent organization, the Aero Medical Association, an international organization of civilian and military specialists in Aviation Medicine.

Registration will begin on the afternoon of Sunday, 23 March, with activities starting the following afternoon, with a fashion talk and show presented by one of Washington's leading stores, and a welcome tea following, in the South American Room of the Statler Hotel. On Tuesday morning, there will be a tour of the Voice of America and the new wax museum, after which the annual luncheon will be held. Wednesday afternoon will feature a tour of the embassies of the Union of South Africa, Spain, Brazil, and Mexico. To bring the meeting to an end, the ladies will join their husbands Wednesday evening at the annual Honors' Night dinner, when presentation of awards for achievement in Aviation Medicine will be made. During the meeting the Hospitality Room will be open for the ladies, where they can obtain any information they may need or meet and enjoy old friends.

Honorary President of the Wives' Wing is Mrs. Ashton Graybiel, wife of Captain Graybiel, School of Aviation Medicine, Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla. Mrs. Newman, wife of Capt. Langdon C. Newman, School of Aviation Medicine, Naval Air Station, Pensacola, is President this year. Other officers of the Executive Board are Mesdames Charles H. (Ret) and Mrs. Edwin G. Bevan of 507 So. England St., Williamsburg, Va., and Mr. Charles James Irwin of Kansas City, Mo., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elza Thompson Irwin. The Reverend L. O. Smith officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Serving as matron of honor for the bride was Mrs. Robert Brandon of Wichita, while Mr. Brandon was best man for the bridegroom.

Mrs. Irwin attended Duke University and was graduated from the College of William and Mary, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Mr. Irwin was graduated from Kansas City State Teachers College, where he was a member of the Phi Sigma Epsilon fraternity, and attended the University of Kansas Law School.

The couple will reside at L 115 Lake Lotawana, Lee's Summit, Mo.

TARBUCK-DENBO—Christ Episcopal Church, San Diego, Calif., was the setting 14 February for the ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Mary Roberta Denbo and Lt(jg). Richard Ray Tarbuck, USN, performed by the Reverend W. Don Brown. The bride is the daughter of Capt. (USN) and Mrs. Robert Wayne Denbo, and parents of the bridegroom are RADM. (USN-Ret) and Mrs. Ray Tarbuck of Coronado.

Mrs. John Williams and Miss Cynthia Denbo, sisters of the bride, Mrs. Lawrence Wells, Mrs. Barry Taylor and Mrs. Richard Dalton were the bride's attendants. Lt(jg). Roy Varner served as best man for the bridegroom and groomsmen were Mr. Richard Denbo, Lts(jg). Joseph Talbot, Dan Butterfield, Thomas Langley, Richard Dalton and James Owen.

After 1 March, the couple will be at home at 19 Granada St., Long Beach, Calif.

PRAY-GOEN—Col. (USMC-Ret) and Mrs. Dixon Goen of San Diego, Calif., have announced the marriage of their daughter, Barbara Wyckoff, to Mr. Mark Howard Pray, jr., also of San Diego. The wedding was solemnized at the First Presbyterian Church, Alton, Ill., 23 December.

Mrs. Pray attended San Diego State College and her husband is a graduate of the school.

Following an extended trip, the couple will make their home at San Diego.

MARTIN-HANDLY—Miss Sharron Mauvia Handly, daughter of Mrs. Albert Handly, jr., of Coronado, Calif., and the late Rear Admiral Handly, USN, became the bride of Lt(jg). Edward Holmes Martin, USN, son of Mr. DeCoursey Martin of Savannah, Ga., on 15 February. The Reverend W. Don Brown officiated at the ceremony in Christ Episcopal Church, San Diego.

Given in marriage by RADM. John V. Peterson, USN, the bride chose Mrs. Julian Dunn and Miss Kay Delsman as her honor attendants, and her bridesmaids included Mrs. Richard DuBridge, Mrs. Elmer McCallum, Misses Margot Ketcham, Natalie Fuldner, Mary Rogers and Mary Gale Buchanan. Lt(jg). Walter C. Nix, USN, served as best man for the bridegroom, with Lts. James Bell, Michael Basford, James Austin, Charles Steel, Eugene Geronimie, Patrick McHenry, Robert Shields, Roderick Crawford and Harold Hollister as ushers.

Mrs. Martin is a graduate of the University of Arizona. Her husband attended the University of Georgia before entering the U. S. Naval Academy, from which he was graduated in 1954. He is currently on duty at the Miramar Naval Air Station.

Following a Mexican honeymoon, the couple will be at home at 172 C Ave., Coronado.

What's Ahead

THE VETERANS ORGANIZATION OF SAGO (U. S. Naval Group China), who were in China during WW II, are holding their Fourth Annual Reunion at the Hotel Warwick in New York City 1-2 August. Details are available from Mr. Gus Bruggemann, 159 Highview Street, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

THE SIXTH MARINE DIVISION will hold an annual reunion dinner on 28 March at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va. The reunion gets underway at 6 p.m. at Harry Lee Hall. Reservations should be made in advance through Lt. Col. John L. Hopkins, Marine Corps Education Center, Quantico.

MAJ. GEN. MARVIN E. KENNEBECK, (right) retiring Assistant for Dental Services in the Office of the Air Force Surgeon General, receives the Legion of Merit 31 January from Maj. Gen. Dan C. Ogle, Air Force Surgeon General. New Dental Services Chief is Brig. Gen. James S. Cathroe.

"Administrative Action" Tangles Annuity Plan

The Comptroller General has ruled that the widow of an Army Major retired for physical disability as mentally incompetent, cannot receive the benefits of the annuity plan for the survivors of retired military personnel because the Army failed to take the necessary administrative action.

In disallowing the claim of Mrs. Gilda Frevola, the Comptroller noted that "the record does not disclose that any reply was made to her letter of August 28, 1956 advising the Army Finance Center of her election on behalf of her husband to receive Veterans Administration disability payments in lieu of retired pay and requesting to be advised as to the amount and method of making the monthly payments required to purchase the annuity benefits payable under an election in her favor."

"Apparently," the Comptroller said, "she was not requested to make such payments and thus had at least constructive notice that the administrative action necessary to perfect her right to the annuity payments had not been taken."

"As far as the record shows," the decision said, "she took no action to correct that situation."

Major Frevola died eleven months later, on 22 July 1957.

The decision also noted that Mrs. Frevola, prior to her 28 August letter, had to submit two applications for annuity plan protection, because the original form she submitted "could not be located."

Retired Unit At Riley

Capt. Loren White, recently returned from Germany, has been named to head the new Retired Activities Unit at Ft. Riley, Kans.

The unit will service retired people in the central Kansas area from the Oklahoma border to the South Dakota line and will be responsible for the eastern two-thirds of Nebraska.

B/G Devereux, USMC-Ret., Seeks Governor Post

Representative James P. S. Devereux (R-Md.) will leave the House of Representatives at the end of the present Congress.

A retired Marine Corps brigadier general, he has served on the House Armed Services Committee since 1952. He was first elected to Congress in 1950 and prior to that served for more than 25 years in the Marine Corps.

General Devereux achieved fame in World War II by defending his Wake Island command for two weeks against attacking Japanese. When the island eventually was captured, he was taken prisoner and held in Japanese POW camps for four years.

General Devereux has announced that he will be a candidate for Republican nomination as Governor of Maryland. State Republican leaders are expected to back his candidacy in the Maryland primary on 20 May.

They Keep Busy

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

NEW NAVY HELICOPTER—First Bell HTL-7 integrated instrument helicopter trainer rolls off Bell Helicopter Corporation assembly line at Fort Worth, Tex. Flight testing is now underway. Navy will use HTL-7's for both basic and instrument helicopter pilot training. An instrument system similar to the one designed for the HTL-7 is being operationally tested in two Bell HUL-1 helicopters assigned to Navy's IGY Deepfreeze III operation in Antarctic. A 260 horsepower Lycoming VO-435 engine powers the new Bell helicopter.

Order Fairchild J-83 For Canadair CL-41

Fairchild's new lightweight J-83 turbojet engine has been selected by Canadair, Ltd., a subsidiary of the General Dynamics Corporation to power prototypes of its basic trainer, the CL-41. The order has just been signed by the two companies.

The engines ordered by Canadair are models of the J-83 jets being developed by the Fairchild Engine Division under USAF contract. Deliveries are scheduled to permit flight testing of the "Canadair Trainer" by spring of 1959. In announcing receipt of the order, N. E. Newbold, Jr., Vice President of the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation, and General Manager of the Engine Division, stated that this was the first export order for an engine in the 2000-lb. thrust class.

The Fairchild engine, which measures approximately 67.5" long and 18" in diameter, is in final development stages. The "Canadair Trainer" is a 2-place, side by side, single engine airplane designed as a basic trainer. It is being built as a private venture by Canadair and meets the requirements of military training commands.

The J-83 engine also has been selected to power the "Bull Goose," a missile being produced by Fairchild for use by the Strategic Air Command.

USAF's Thormen Train At Douglas

The Air Force's first Thor IRBM missilemen are now in training at the Douglas Aircraft Co., Santa Monica, Calif.

Full scale training will begin soon at Cooke AFB, Calif.

Maj. Gen. Wade

The missilemen, handpicked from Air Force bases throughout the world, are commanded by Maj. Gen. David Wade, commander of the 1st Ballistic Missile Division (SAC) at Cooke.

General Wade said the officers and airmen now in Santa Monica will eventually participate in the training of additional crews for the nation's first operational 1500-mile intermediate range ballistic missile. They will presumably train the Thor squadron scheduled for deployment to England in December.

The Douglas training program, under the direction of James S. Farra, Service Director, will also encompass technical assistance at Cooke.

6,300-Mile Snark Missile, Plus Manned Bombers, Seen As Interim Deterrent

Mass use of the Snark 6,300-mile range missile in conjunction with B-52 bombers would give the United States an effective deterrent over the Soviet system well into the middle 1960's and beyond, according to officials of Northrop Aircraft, Inc., manufacturers of the Snark.

Brig. Gen. John R. Alison, USAFR, Northrop vice president, and company engineers, held a press conference in Washington, D. C., last week in which they pointed out that while the Nation is pointing toward the long-range ballistic missile traveling outside of the earth's atmosphere, the air-breathing near-sonic Snark is already developed and proven and is admirably fitted to take its part in the deterrent forces to complement and supplement our present inventory of strategic

Brig. Gen. Alison

The missile is highly mobile, may be transported in Douglas C-124 Globemasters. Its reaction time is short so that it may be fired on short notice.

One Snark squadron is already in training at Patrick AFB, Fla., and a squadron site is under construction at Presque Isle, Me., 4,200 miles from Moscow.

A particular advantage of the Snark which the engineers stressed is its stellar monitored inertial guidance system, which they say is incapable of being jammed. It may be preset before take-off to travel a straight course to its target, a dog-leg course, or a round-about course. It may be set so that it cannot be changed, or may be so adjusted before launching that it may be recalled and returned in case of a false alarm.

Services Study New RAMAC Data System; Aims At Management Aid

A revolutionary electronic data processing system is being studied by the Services for possible use as a management tool.

Known as the 305 RAMAC (Random Access Method of Accounting and Control), the computer was developed by the International Business Machine Company's San Jose, Calif., laboratory.

IBM officials who demonstrated the new machine for the press in Washington, D. C., on 18 February, said that the device "offers a completely new approach to accounting and business control."

Up-to-Minute Data

RAMAC processes individual transactions as they occur and updates all related records in a single step. All files in the self-contained, electronic, record-keeping system are maintained on an up-to-the-minute basis.

The Navy, which tested RAMAC at the Norfolk, Va., Naval Shipyard, placed one of the machines into operation at Newport, R. I., Supply Depot and installed another at the Charleston, S. C., Naval Shipyard.

The Air Defense Command has installed one at Hamilton AFB, Calif.

The Army, which tested a pre-production model at the Louisville, Ky., Medical Depot, plans to install a production model there in March. At the same time, the Army said, the Finance Corps has the machine under consideration for possible use.

Services Not Committed

The Services emphasized, however, that they have not committed themselves firmly to the new RAMAC since it is in the pioneer stage. It was pointed out that a machine of such complexity may require evaluation for one to two years before a final determination is made.

At the same time, it was noted, there is such a large variety of electronic data processing systems on the market, that the Services have the opportunity to acquire machines for specific purposes.

The Army, for example, uses 22 varieties of electronic computers.

Recently, the Marine Corps announced plans to use the Remington Rand Univac File Computer to keep electronic control of its stock balances. Headquarters said the system is expected to be in operation by 1 July.

Consolidate Information

Transaction information about each supply item at Marine Corps Bases will be transmitted by IBM transceivers to machines at the Marine Corps Supply Depots, Albany, Ga., and Barstow, Calif. Each week, the information will be transmitted to the Marine Corps Supply Activity at Philadelphia, Pa. The consolidated information will reflect management action necessary at the Service level.

The IBM 305 RAMAC is built around a disk memory unit with a storage capacity of five million digits. The memory unit consists of 50 magnetic disks arranged in a vertical stack. Both sides of the disks are used for recording data with 100 recording tracks on each disk face. Access to the recorded information is made by means of an electronic arm.

Any item of information stored in the memory unit can be located in milliseconds.

RAMAC Answers Questions

The RAMAC can be interrogated by the console operator for information, such as the warehouse location of a particular item of stock, the number on hand, their cost, user rate, price, the rate of demand and weight of the item. Many other statistics suited to a particular need can be stored in RAMAC's memory unit.

Among the wide variety of uses for RAMAC, IBM officials cite the following: billing, inventory, merchandising control for retailers, fund and appropriation accounting for city and state governments, production control for manufacturers, inventory control for the textile industry, and, billing and inventory for an automotive parts wholesaler.

To date, an IBM spokesman said, nearly 1,000 of the new machines have been ordered by the Government and various segments of industry.

The RAMAC rents for $3,200 a month or may be purchased for $224,000.

B-70 DESIGNATED

The North American WS-110A bomber has been designated the B-70.

After an intensive two-year design competition, it was announced last December that North American Aviation, Inc., had won the contract upon the unanimous recommendation of SAC, AMC and ARDC.

The B-70 will be capable of speeds in excess of 2,000 miles an hour at altitudes above 70,000 feet.

"We are well into preliminary design engineering," Mr. Ray Rice, Vice President and General Manager of the Los Angeles Division, declared.

ATOMIC ROCKET—Schematic drawing by Rocketdyne, a division of North American Aviation, Inc., illustrates a possible concept of nuclear rocket engine. Reactor located in combustion chamber would provide almost limitless energy to convert working fluid to ultra-high temperatures, create propulsive thrust several times greater than that of current chemical rockets. In drawing, working fluid would be pumped from tank into reactor area by high speed turbo-pump.

ARDC-Beech Join Hands For Rescue Gear

Air Force jets may soon be bombing survivors to safety with a new emergency rescue container sponsored by the Air Research and Development Command.

Packing 450 pounds of survival equipment, the container hooks into the bomb rack of supersonic jet aircraft. It is 14-feet long, 23 inches in diameter.

Each container is crammed with enough food and medical supplies to last one man 30 days. It contains both arctic and tropical gear and standard rescue equipment.

For sea rescues the equipment is packed into an automatically-inflating raft.

The container, developed under contract with Beech Aircraft Corp., Wichita, Kans., is now undergoing final tests at the Wright Air Development Center, Dayton, Ohio.

ONE OF THE NEW ARRIVALS at Fort Rucker, Ala., is introduced to the activities of the House and Garden Club at a reception at the Welcome Center. Mrs. Pat Huskey looks on with interest as Mrs. Jean Mathews, Mrs. Jean Williams and Mrs. Ann Robbins describe the Club. The incoming women were all wives of students in Fixed Wing Class 58-4, which recently arrived from Camp Gary, Texas. The Welcome Center is sponsored by the Hospitality Committee of the Women's Club.

RAdm. Sylvester Gets Star

RAdm. John Sylvester, Deputy Chief of Staff on the Joint Staff, U. S. Commander-in-Chief, Europe, will don his third star on 11 April and assume duties as Commander, Amphibious Force, Pacific Fleet.

eral Montague served at Ft. Hoyle, Md., Schofield Barracks, T. H., and Ft. Sheridan, Ill., before returning to the Military Academy as an instructor in 1926. A graduate of the Field Artillery School Advanced Course at Ft. Sill, Okla., where he later served as an instructor, and the Command and General Staff College, General Montague returned again as an instructor to the U. S. Military Academy in July 1939. Named Artillery Commander of the 83d Infantry Division in June 1942, he served with it at Camp Breckinridge, Ky., and in England, before accompanying it to France, where it participated in combat with the First, Third and Ninth Armies. When the Division returned to the U. S. for deactivation, General Montague was assigned as Artillery Commander of the 9th Division, before returning to the States in September 1946 as Assistant Commandant of the Antiaircraft School at Ft. Bliss. General Montague commanded the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project, Sandia Base, N. Mex.; was Director of Operations, Plans, Organization and Training, European Command; Deputy Chief of Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va.; and served as Commanding General of I Corps, Far East Command, before assuming his last post as Commander-in-Chief, Caribbean Command.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Moran Montague; and one son, Maj. Robert M. Montague, jr., USA, of Sandia Base, N. Mex.; and three grandchildren.

Maj. Gen. Egbert F. Bullene, USA-Ret.

Funeral and burial services were held at the Presidio of San Francisco, 25 February for Maj. Gen. Egbert F. Bullene, USA-Ret., who died at Letterman Army Hospital 21 February. He was 62 years old.

Born at Salinas, Calif., General Bullene was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1917 and transferred to the U. S. Army the following Fall, when he was commissioned in the Cavalry. A veteran of the second battle of the Marne and the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives in WWI, General Bullene was transferred to the Chemical Warfare Service in 1928. A graduate of the Army Industrial College, he saw service in the Philippines and China. Graduating from the Command and General Staff College in 1937, General Bullene remained on at the College as an instructor until 1939, when he entered the Army War College, from which he was graduated the following year. During WWII, he served as the Armored Force Chemical Officer at Ft. Knox, Ky.; as Chief of the Training Division, Office of the Chief of the Chemical Warfare Service, Washington; and as Commander of the Chemical Warfare Service Unit Training Center, Camp Sibert, Ala., before joining the joint U. S., British, Canadian Army, Navy and Air Force secret San Jose Project at San Jose Island, Republic of Panama. During his participation with the latter, General Bullene was sent to the European theater, where he devised field expedients for lessening the danger from the excessive number of 4.2-inch chemical mortar shell bursts. Preceding his appointment as Chief Chemical Officer of the Army in 1951, he served as Chemical Officer, U. S. Army Forces, Western Pacific; Commander of the Army Chemical Center, and Deputy Chief of the Chemical Corps. He was retired from active duty in 1954 and had since made his home at Carmel, Calif.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lois Bullene of Carmel; and one son, Midshipman Roger Bullene, USNA.

Col. Reginald Bifield Cocroft, USA-Ret.

Funeral services were held at the Ft. Myer, Va. Chapel 15 January for Col. Reginald Bifield Cocroft, USA-Ret., who died at the age of 69, of a heart attack, at DeWitt Army Hospital, Ft. Belvoir, Va., 7 January. Burial was at Arlington National Cemetery.

Son of the Reverend and Mrs. Thomas Henry Cocroft of Providence, R. I., Colonel Cocroft attended Brown University, before entering the U. S. Military Academy, from which he was graduated in 1910, with a commission in the Coast Artillery. His service assignments included tours in the Philippines, Spain, Belgium and France. In 1933, he received an M. A. degree from Georgetown University and served further tours in Washington, both before and after his retirement from active duty, with the War Assets Administration and the War Department Manpower Board. Since, he had been a resident of Hamilton, Va.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Dorothy Capwell Cocroft of Hamilton; one son, Mr. Reginald B. Cocroft, jr., (USMA '43), of Vienna, Va.; two daughters, Mrs. Thomas P. Griffith of Hamilton and Baltimore, and Mrs. Erwin R. Brigham, wife of Major Brigham, of West Point, N. Y.; and ten grandchildren.

Journal Survey Reveals Committee Favors Major Changes In Pay Measure

bill and their present views could be swayed in another direction upon presentation of convincing arguments by the Defense Department or other witnesses.

They have, however, formed certain "interim" opinions and these views are reflected in THE JOURNAL poll. Here are the questions THE JOURNAL asked and answers the Congressmen gave:

Favor Cost-of-Living Increase

Q—Are you in favor of the 6% cost-of-living increase proposed by the Defense Department for all personnel with over two years' service, but opposed by Mr. Cordiner?

A—All 12 members said they favor a cost-of-living increase. Ten said they favor the 6% Pentagon proposal; two said they have not determined whether 6% is the correct amount. A number of the Congressmen expressed the view that it would be grossly unfair to members of the Armed Forces if they were not granted a cost-of-living increase at a time when it is expected that all other Government workers will receive such an increase.

Boost Retired Pay

Q—Do you favor a pay raise for those already on the retired rolls of the Armed Forces?

A—All 12 members said they favor an amendment to the pay bill which would grant increased retired pay. Several were not certain, however, that a straight 6% increase (which has been mentioned) is the right answer. Some said "perhaps it should be more." Others advanced the theory that it might be desirable to base increased retired pay on the overall military pay increases rather than on the cost-of-living feature. Most were agreed that their views on this subject are unlikely to change as a result of future testimony.

Retain Longevity

Q—Are you in favor of retaining, eliminating or modifying the present longevity system?

A—Eleven members said they would like to see some form of longevity criteria retained in the pay system. One member was undecided. Of the 11 who favor the longevity system, several indicated that it might be possible to "phase it out" gradually over a period of years, but then were adamant in their belief that the system cannot be brought to an abrupt halt as recommended by Mr. Cordiner. One member conveyed the views of several others when he said he is "opposed to any frontal attack" on longevity and "it would be a serious mistake to abolish it outright." Others said it may be possible to continue a form of longevity by adding additional step-in-grade increases to the Pentagon proposal.

Count All Pay For Retirement

Q—The active duty supplemental pay proposed by the Defense Department would not be counted for retirement pay purposes. Chairman Kilday has mentioned that it is essential for active duty pay and retirement pay to maintain a closer relationship. On that basis, are you in favor of counting the active duty supplemental for retirement pay purposes?

A—Six members said they are opposed to the Defense Department's plan to

VETERANS TESTIFY

The American Legion, Reserve Officers Association and the Disabled Officers Association added their support to the military pay bill on 26 February, but urged the Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee to make a number of changes in the proposal.

Col. William Doyle said the American Legion favored higher pay for top officers proposed by the Cordiner Committee, rather than the reduced amount asked by the Pentagon. The Legion also urged that the pay plan be amended to authorize payment under the new scales for officers who are called to active duty for only 30 days.

Col. John T. Carlton, Executive Director of the Reserve Officers Association, said his organization also "vehemently objects" to this provision of the bill. The ROA said it favored increases for retired personnel and increased quarters allowances for all military personnel.

The ROA said it feared that the proposed proficiency pay system "may give disproportionate incentive to technicians" and result in "cavalier treatment of the fighting man."

G. D. Tilghman, National Adjutant of the Disabled Officers Association, urged the Committee to restore the disability retirement system in effect prior to 1949. Under that plan disabled members of the Armed Forces received 75 per cent of their base pay upon retirement.

ignore the active duty supplement when it comes time to figure retirement pay. The other six were undecided. One Congressman declared that if members of the Armed Forces are entitled to the pay, it should be added to their base pay and not counted separately as a "supplemental."

Oppose Pay Spread

Q—The Defense Department proposes to phase the new pay increases in over a period of four years, are you in favor of this method of putting the plan into operation?

A—Five members said the raises should not be delayed but should be given immediately. In the words of one member, "They are either worth it, or they are not." Two said if the phase-in plan is adopted, the first increase "has to be dramatic" or the phase-in period has to be speeded up. Three members favored the phase-in proposal and two are undecided.

Favor Higher Pay For Top Officers

Q—The Cordiner Committee recommended higher pay for senior officers than that recommended by the Defense Department. Are you in favor of the Cordiner proposals or those put forward by the Pentagon?

A—Seven members said they are inclined to go along with the Cordiner Committee recommendations. Only one member favored the Defense Department rates. Two members said they believe both proposals are a little high, and one of the two suggested that it might be desirable to put the pay of top generals and admirals more in line with the pay of Congressmen ($22,500). Two members were undecided.

Want Proficiency Pay Legislation

Q—Chairman Kilday has asked the Defense Department witnesses whether they believe it would be desirable to provide specific language in the pay bill authorizing the Service Secretaries to establish proficiency pay according to the needs of their individual Services. Do you believe the committee should write such language into the pay bill?

A—Ten members favor such action. A number of them pointed out, however, that it probably would not be wise to spell out every detail, since the four Services each have different requirements. The other two members of the committee were undecided on this point.

PAY PLAN NOT AS PURE AS IVORY

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy, with an assist from Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D-SC), managed a plug for Ivory Soap during testimony on the military pay bill, although the Procter & Gamble product wasn't mentioned by name.

Secretary McElroy, during his testimony, admitted that he is willing to see certain features of the pay bill changed. Congressman Rivers asked, "Then, I take it you don't consider the bill 99 and 44/100 percent pure?"

The Secretary agreed. He said, "I only know of one thing that is that pure." Ivory Soap, manufactured by Mr. McElroy's former firm, Procter & Gamble, is advertised as 99 and 44/100 percent pure.

needs." Unless the Armed Forces launch a pay-for-merit system, he declared, "we are not going to succeed."

Secretary McElroy said the "severe monetary sacrifices" which top officers and enlisted men are forced to ask of their families must be eliminated.

General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff; General Thomas D. White, Air Force Chief of Staff; Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, and General Randolph McCall Pate, Commandant of the Marine Corps, all agreed on the need to increase the pay of retired members of the Armed Forces and to assure that retired pay is properly related to active duty pay.

"Genteel Poverty" For Retired

General Taylor said young officers see too many retired families living in "genteel poverty."

All four of the Service Chiefs also said they favor immediate implementation of the pay increases rather than the four-year phase-in contemplated by the Pentagon proposal. They spoke up strongly for higher pay for top officers, noting that it is essential for young officers to be able to look up the advancement ladder and see brighter opportunities.

General Taylor stressed the need for higher quality combat leaders than in WWII. Admiral Burke told of serious shortages of Line lieutenants on surface ships.

General White talked of the need for increased rental allowances and sharply criticized the phase-in feature of the pay bill. General Pate said the Marine Corps has a special problem in its enlisted grade structure because Marine corporals are non-commissioned officers. He said there is a need to overhaul the proposed step-in-grade increases for the lower enlisted grades.

Service Secretaries Give Views

Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates told the Kilday Subcommittee, "Without the right kind of people, intelligent, devoted and well trained, everything else is nothing." He said many Navy men love the Navy and "it is not fair, and it is not intelligent, to make these people choose between the Navy and a reasonable standard of living for themselves and their families."

Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker declared that inducements for civilian life "offer formidable competition." He said the Army not only needs technicians and trained, skilled men but also "resourceful combat leaders of all grades." He held out the promise of more stabilized assignments for Army personnel and said the Army is "developing an enlisted evaluation system" which will aid in better identification and utilization of enlisted skills, and which "will permit competition for advancement on an Army-wide basis." He said the new system will be used to select non-commissioned officers for the new E-8 and E-9 grades.

Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas told the committee that manpower is the Air Force's "most valuable asset." He said the U. S. had indicated its willingness to pay the price to get modern weapons systems, but he doesn't "believe we have applied the same philosophy in attracting and retaining the people we need."

Secretary Douglas said the proportion of Air Force personnel who are technically trained is growing at a fast rate and as missile units become operational personnel requirements "can be expected to undergo even more change." He declared, "We don't need more people in uniform. We need more skilled people."

The Air Force Secretary also made a special plea for top-ranking officers. He said "Our higher ranking officers are grossly underpaid when one considers the tremendous responsibilities they have for the defense and security of the country." He said general officers "are not as well off today, in terms of buying power, as they were in 1939 when they were captains or majors."

Pay Change Highlights

In other highlights of the hearings these points were made:

- The Pentagon proposal will be amended to provide that E-1's with four months' service will continue to receive their current pay, $83.20.

- The Defense Department is going to take another look at the special pay for doctors and dentists.

- Officers who have enjoyed the most favorable promotion attrition in the past will be assessed the most severe retention attrition in the future.

- A new Pentagon proposal to overhaul the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 will reach the Capitol by mid-March.

- The OPA changes will provide authority for the Army and Air Force to make up to five per cent of their promotions from below the zone.

- Senator Stennis indicated his willingness to go along with the promised changes in the Officer Personnel Act. He said it is obvious that the Services will have to "clear the road ahead" if they are to provide adequate promotion opportunities for young officers.

- If the Congress should desire to adopt the higher pay scales recommended for top officers by the Cordiner Committee, the Defense Department would not object.

- The Pentagon continues to oppose a move to grant cost-of-living increases to men and women with less than two years' service. Secretary McElroy explained that cost-of-living factors do not affect this group greatly inasmuch as most of them are provided with free food, clothing, and shelter.

- The term-retention contract plan for Reserve officers (a part of the original Cordiner package) is now undergoing new review within the Pentagon and is expected to be modified to provide a more generous application of the contract principle.

CALIF. LEGISLATURE SUPPORTS PAY INCREASE

California's Legislature has introduced a Joint Resolution supporting military pay increases.

The resolution urged the Congress of the United States to undertake immediate action to make upward adjustments in the pay scales of key personnel in the Armed Forces in the interests of national defense.

This is the second time that the California Legislature has petitioned the Congress on behalf of Armed Services' pay increases. Their Joint Resolution No. 36, 31 May 1957, also supported pay increases.

Hercules Transports Join Far East Forces

The first two Lockheed C-130 Hercules transports assigned to military airlift in the Orient are now in action with the 483d Troop Carrier Wing, Ashiya, Japan.

Eight more are scheduled to arrive by March.

The planes were ferried 12,166 statute miles from the factory at Marietta, Ga., to the Japanese base by Lockheed pilots Harvey Adams and Don Mills. Point-to-point flying time was 34 hours, 49 minutes—less than a day and a half.
